Fredric I. Lederer is Chancellor Professor of Law and Director of the Center for Legal and Court Technology (CLCT) and the Courtroom 21 Project at the College of William & Mary's School of Law. He received his B.S. from Polytechnic University in New York and his J.D. from Columbia University Law School where he was a member of the Board of Editors of the Columbia Law Review and recipient of the Archie O'Dawson prize (which provided for study with judges at each of the three levels of the federal courts, including Justice Harlan of the Supreme Court). He holds an LL.M. from the University of Virginia. His post-graduate work includes a year as a Fulbright-Hayes Scholar in Freiburg, Germany. He served as a member of the United States Army's Judge Advocate General's Corps until 1980 when he joined the William & Mary faculty. He has served as prosecutor, defense counsel, and trial judge.

Louis Cinquanto is Cornerstone Legal Consultants' client director and senior project manager. Formerly the national manager for litigation technology support for Buchanan, Ingersoll, and Rooney, Mr. Cinquanto managed e-discovery production and trial presentations for 14 national offices. During his career, he has managed some of the largest e-discovery cases in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, including many involving city corruption, consumer fraud, and internet-based crimes.

Prior to founding Cornerstone, Mr. Cinquanto was a pilot in the United States Air Force where he developed the first database application of its kind to let Air Force members remotely access, schedule and track their own training. This innovative, award-winning application is currently in use at Air Force bases around the world.
